INTRODUCTION

The growth of lesbian and gay studies has been explosive over the last decade, the scope and breadth of the work produced, publishing. inventory of some 500 scholars working in gay and lesbian studies. To facilitate the use of the Directory, we have not only listed the entries alphabetically but also by academic field, institution, and geographic region, approximating well up to their bibliographic lists for each scholar. We hope that this Directory will have a long and useful life in the field which we, like the rest of you, are enjoying in a happy and healthy way.

Though this is a directory, it is not a passive one. It is a living and growing one. Academic organizations have not been able to keep up with the rapidly evolving nature of the field, and the fact that we have had to rely on voluntary contributors to our Directory is a fact which also stands for improvement in the future of the field. We hope that with such an excellent and growing body of work...

INTRODUCTION

The growth of lesbian and gay studies has been explosive over the last decade, the scope and breadth of the work produced, astonishing. Hundreds of books and articles have appeared on various aspects of lesbian and gay history, politics and culture—work that has transformed our own sense of who we are and has begun to convey to a larger audience the challenging specialness of our lives.

Given this sudden upsurge, it has been difficult for even the committed specialist in gay and lesbian studies to stay abreast of the outpouring of new scholarship. And graduate students considering lesbian and gay studies as a career have found it difficult to identify faculty members, universities or regions of the country that have developed a critical mass of researchers in the areas of their special interest. What has been sorely needed is some sort of systematic listing of those at work in this burgeoning new field, a coherent, if preliminary charting of the waters.

This Directory is meant to fill that need. It is the product of several years of work, and for the past year has consumed the energies of the Center for Lesbian and Gay Studies (CLAGS) Publications Committee. We have, over the years, done everything we could think of to circulate our Directory form — from including it in newsletter mailings, to leaving stacks on conference tables. We have even contacted a number of scholars directly, after noting their surprising absence from early lists.

As a result of these efforts we are pleased to be able to offer this Directory of some 600 scholars working in gay and lesbian studies. To facilitate the use of the Directory, we have not only listed the entries alphabetically but also by academic field, institution, and geographic location, appending as well up to four bibliographic items for each scholar. Our hope is that this Directory will bring some coherence to an emerging field which has thus far been expanding in a happily chaotic fashion.

Though this is a pioneering effort, we make no pretense to it being a definitive one. Absolute comprehensiveness has not been possible because of the rapidly evolving nature of the field, and the fact that we have had to rely on voluntary responses to our Directory form (which also accounts for inconsistencies in the format of the bibliographic entries). Our hope is that with each new edition—we plan one every three years—we will be able to better approach completeness. To that end, we have included a form at the back of this volume, and we hope that anyone not listed will quickly send in the requisite information.

We believe this Directory will prove an important tool for facilitating communication between scholars already working in the field or hoping to enter it. And that, in turn, will help to guarantee the secure place of lesbian and gay studies in academic life—and in the consciousness of the country at large.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

The primary responsibility for this Directory has fallen to the 1993-4 CLAGS Publications Committee: Lucile Duberman, Martin Duberman, Jeffrey Escoffier and John di Carlo. But over the years, and sometimes at critical points, a number of other individuals have made important contributions. The Publications Committee especially wants to thank: Luke Doles, Dan Evans, Seymour Kleinberg, Greg Kucher, Matt Rottnek, and Catherine Sears. Elaine Tannenbaum helped design the directory and grants from the Bills Foundation (Bill Hibsher and Bill Johnson) and the office of Assemblywoman Deborah Glick have helped to absorb the costs of bringing this volume to publication.
