

Women's Studies Program
BROOKLYN COLLEGE

AGENDA

General Meeting on November 4, 1974

1. Report from the present core course faculty: Social Science 10.7 - Sydelle Brooks Levy, Nancy Romer. Humanities 10.7 - Pamela Farley, Marilyn Arthur-Whitfield.
2. Reports by representative members of the faculty teaching Women's Studies Program electives within various departments: Psychology, Terry Landau; Sociology, Judy Lerner; English, Claire Sprague; Philosophy, Abigail Rosenthal.
3. Those who have taught, are now teaching, and those who have indicated active interest in teaching Women's Studies courses in their respective disciplines are invited to present their conceptions of the way in which they would teach these courses. Any faculty member who would like to submit a course description for a Women's Studies elective within her department, is invited to share ideas with other faculty members at this meeting.
4. All students who have taken courses in Women's Studies on either the introductory or elective level are asked to share their experiences, and to make recommendations for booklists and points for discussion in future courses. Students' ideas on articulation of core courses would be particularly helpful to faculty planning, since these courses present a vital proving ground for working out the interdisciplinary aspects of the program.
